EPA is investigating the source, extent, and nature of hazardous substances, pollutants or contaminants, or hazardous waste on or about the Davis Liquid waste Site located off Tarklin Road in Smithfield, Rhode Island.

The Davis Liquid Waste Site is approximately a 15-acre mixed hazardous and municipal waste landfill in Smithfield, Rhode Island. The Site is owned by the Davis family. The site first came to attention in 1977, when a fire occurred at the Davis liquid waste Site involving chemical drums and used tires. Over the years, contamination spread beyond the borders of the site causing groundwater contamination. The State of Rhode Island led the clean-up of the site until EPA assumed leadership in the fall of 1984. EPA included the Site on the Superfund National Priorities List in December 1982. The Remedial Investigation and Feasibility Study was completed in 1986 and the Record of Decision signed on September 29, 1987.
